Flashback: Senator Obama pushed bill that helped destroy more than 15,000 TONS of ammunition, 400,000 small arms and 1,000 anti-aircraft missiles in Ukraine

- Obama traveled to Ukraine with Sen. Dick Lugar in 2005 just seven months after he became a senator, touring surplus weapons stockpiles
- Most of the small arms and ammunition were left over when Soviets withdrew from Eastern bloc nations, and later dumped in Ukraine
- The two senators secured U.S. funding to help destroy the weapons instead of leaving them intact
- Ukraine exported more than 700,000 small arms in 2004-2007, including 101,000 each to Libya and the UK, and 260,000 to the U.S.
- But most of the ammunition stockpiles – crucial for keeping a standing army battle-ready – were destroyed
- Ukraine is in a staring match with Russian President Vladimir Putin, who has designs on recapturing portions of the former Soviet nation

As a U.S. senator, Barack Obama won $48 million in federal funding to help Ukraine destroy thousands of tons of guns and ammunition – weapons which are now unavailable to the Ukrainian army as it faces down Russian President Vladimir Putin during his invasion of Crimea.

In August 2005, just seven months after his swearing-in, Obama traveled to Donetsk in Eastern Ukraine with then-Indiana Republican Senator Dick Lugar, touring a conventional weapons site.

The two met in Kiev with President Victor Yushchenko, making the case that an existing Cooperative Threat Reduction Program covering the destruction of nuclear weapons should be expanded to include artillery, small arms, anti-aircraft weapons, and conventional ammunition of all kinds.

After a stopover in London, the senators returned to Washington and declared that the U.S. should devote funds to speed up the destruction of more than 400,000 small arms, 1,000 anti-aircraft missiles, and more than 15,000 tons of ammunition.

SCROLL DOWN FOR VIDEO
Obama, then a junior senator on the Foreign Relations Committee, worked with then-Republican committee chair Dick Lugar (L) to oversee destruction of Soviet-era war materiel through an agreement that Lugar had brokered years earlier, covering only nuclear weapons.

Photographs from the trip show Obama inspecting a plant where Soviet-era artillery shells and shoulder-fired missiles were collecting dust, leftovers dumped in Ukraine after the USSR withdrew from Eastern bloc nations after the once-mighty communist nation fell apart.

The United Nations had already identified some 7 million small arms and light weapons, and 2 million tons of conventional ammunition, warehoused in more than 80 weapons depots spread across the country.

Many of the artillery shells shown in photographs from Donetsk, multiple weapons experts told MailOnline, would be the same types of ammunition required to repel advancing Russian divisions as they advanced to the west, had they not been destroyed.

Two experts said the ammunition, particularly small-arms rounds, would have been useful to train Ukraine’s armed forces and million-strong reserves.

"Vast stocks of conventional munitions and military supplies have accumulated in Ukraine," Obama said in an August 30, 2005 statement from Donetsk. "Some of this stockpile dates from World War I and II, yet most dates from Cold War buildup and the stocks left behind by Soviet withdrawals from East Germany, the Czech Republic, Hungary and Poland."
by keeping them out of conflicts around the world."

More than a year later, President George W. Bush signed into law a proposal authored by Obama and Lugar.

Sen. Lugar lost his seat in 2012 after it emerged that he no longer lived in Indiana, the state he represented. Obama became president in 2008, and now faces a crisis in the nation he once sought to disarm.

Obama said then that the existing Cooperative Threat Reduction Program 'has effectively disposed of thousands of weapons of mass destruction, but we must do far more to keep deadly conventional weapons like anti-aircraft missiles out of the hands of terrorists.'

Much of the Ukrainian small-arms supply was ultimately exported, not scrapped, by a Yushchenko regime that chose revenue from arms dealing over the cost of melting down metal.

In 2008 the Stockholm International Peace Research Institute reported that between 2004 and 2007, the Ukrainian Export Control Service told the UN that it sent 721,777 small arms and light weapons to 27 different countries.

The United States was the top recipient, with more than 260,000 of those weapons, followed by the UK and Libya, which each imported more than 101,000.

That flood of weapons exports has continued, with annual export records showing hundreds of thousands of new exports each year, covering everything from pistols and carbine rifles to heavy machine guns and anti-tank weapons.
Payback: Obama presented Lugar with the Presidential Medal of Freedom in November 2013

Russian President Vladimir Putin (C) sent troops into the Crimea, a Ukrainian peninsula populated by more than 1 million ethnic Russians, without meeting significant military resistance.

But while today’s 130,000-strong standing Ukrainian military isn’t short on AK-47’s, Russian troops have met little to no large-scale resistance from armored divisions or heavy artillery as they steamrolled their way into Crimea.

Some of that was Ukraine's own doing – it sold 320 tanks to Pakistan in the 1990s, for instance – but Obama and Lugar accelerated the pace of the country’s arms liquidation.

While the Ukrainian army seems to have been careful to avoid provoking an even larger conflict, it's impossible to know whether Putin would have behaved differently in the face of columns of heavy weapons that once belonged to the Soviet Union in whose KGB he held a high-ranking position.

Sky News video broadcast on Tuesday showed Russian troops firing automatic weapons over the heads of apparently unarmed Ukrainian Air Force personnel near a contested airfield in Crimea.

Well you won't see this info on the nightly news shows. Obama was the co-author of the bill so his news media will keep it covered up.

This is an absolutely stupid and dishonest article. Do you think a 7 month junior senator pushed anything. He was on the committee, and went with Lugar, the head of the committee and a long time senator. Whoever wrote this really hates President Obama.

"Obama pushed bill that helped destroy more than 15,000 TONS of ammunition, 400,000 small arms and 1,000 anti-aircraft missiles in Ukraine when he was a Senator"........... Anyone that says that was a bad idea has absolutely no clue about what has and is going on in the world...so right wingers. Since Ukraine was liberated they have been ruled by a succession of rather brutal, autocratic, kleptocratic thugs. including the darling little Tymoshenko, who was probably one of the worst. And anyone thinks that that will change after their latest coup is also a bit right wing

Well now, I see you guys are missing the point. The plan was that IF the Ukraine would give up their munitions - and make Clinton look gooooooood - THEN the US would stand with them in the event of military action. It has nothing to do with the munitions and the ability of the Ukraine to defeat the Russians. It is about Obama letting another ally give up their munitions - and make Clinton look goooooood -

So not giving themselves an opportunity to defend themselves is better? There are some thing worse than death. Serfdom is one of them.

Oh! are we pretending that this wouldn't be a one sided battle regardless of how much ammunition they may have had? "While Ukraine has a good number of forces (129,950), they are vastly outnumbered by Russia (845,000)." "The air and naval assets decidedly favor Russia too."

Which is the exact POINT of the US "promising" they would stand with them - with all the arms and force the USA can bring to bare - being shoved to the side now that Putin has decided to play empire builder again.

He is a danger to the well being of USA... A worthless example of Progressive Liberalism bent on destroying the country that has given him everything he owns - starting with the woman called Hillary Clinton... I am Obama au deux.

Clinton also was instrumental in disarming the Ukraine, along with the UK and other European nations. The promise was that we would protect them if something happened. Guess what? We won't. The leaders lied to this country, left it defenseless.

He has now set his sights at doing the same to the US. Dropping our troop levels by 440,000 and 450,000 to pre WWII numbers. He's bought up our ammo and is closing lead factories.... How is this making us safer ? just curious.
